

Options
decorative glass

georgian

decorative glass
georgian

June 2008

Options

decorative glass

georgian

single bar

cross

grid (6 over 6)

6 over arch

cottage border #1

cottage border #2

true arch

gothic arch

Options

decorative glass

georgian

For centuries, architects have used well proportioned and beautifully designed windows to help to define a building's style.

This is true of the Georgian period more than any other. Tall, elegant windows, made up of equally sized panes, were spaced evenly and symmetrically on the front and rear elevations of the building.

Sliding sash windows with six panes on the top sash over six panes on the bottom sash were a popular design.

Georgian bar inserts are a stylish and practical alternative to conventional Georgian window bars. Protected from dust and dirt, between the panes, the bars never need to be cleaned.

Georgian bars look best in windows that are taller than they are wide (portrait). Traditionally the individual panes in Georgian windows had a height-to-width ratio of approximately 4:3.

Ask your window installer if your window openings would suit a Georgian bar design.

colours

|          |                                                                                     |               |
|----------|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|---------------|
| white    |    | 18mm25mm  |
| oak      |    | 18mm25mm* |
| rosewood |   | 18mm25mm* |
| mahogany |  | 18mm25mm* |
| black    |  | 18mm25mm* |

Colours to Match
GlasSeal stock a range of Georgian bar colours to match all popular window frames and door colours and finishes. Custom colours are available on request.

18mm and 25mm Widths***
All standard colours of Georgian bar are available in 18mm wide bar and on request in 25mm widths.

Two-Tone
For window frames, doors or conservatories which have a white finish internally but different external finish, two-tone Georgian bar is available on request.

